

EDITOR JOURNAL:—The building known as Mineral Annex No. 2 is situated on the south side of the Main Building between Annex No. 1 and the picket fence which surrounds the Centennial grounds. It is about 350 feet long and 30 feet wide. Although the principal entrances to the grounds are on this side and nearly every visitor can see those buildings, still the location is not desirable, perhaps not more than one person out of every hundred ever visits either one of Mineral Annexes. We spent about two hours in Annex No. 2 yesterday and with the exception of a few attendants to take care of the exhibits and a policeman, we had the show to ourselves all that time. This lack of visitors is not on account of the inferiority of the displays made here, but for the reason that when these buildings have once been passed to see the more famous attractions, few persons think of returning to them until they are ready to leave the grounds. The truth is that

THE EXHIBITION IS TOO LARGE, For nine tenths of the people who come to see it. The other tenth is those only who can spare the time required to see everything and indeed they must be very industrious or many curious things will be overlooked.

Entering Annex No. 2 from the west we find the first display on the left to be a small but handsomely arranged exhibit of coal and iron ores from the

POWELTON ESTATE, Situated in several contiguous counties of western Pennsylvania, and in Belmont Co., Ohio. This estate has an area of 14,883 acres, the approximate counties of which above the water level are 114,157,000 tons of coal and iron ore. The collieries are capable of producing 3,000 tons per day. On the opposite side, the anthracite fuel Co., of Rondout, N. Y., have a neat column of bricks made from coal dust, and next to this there is an exhibit of cement building stone made by the Howesacre association from Scholharie Co., N. J. Mr. Philip Neukmet comes next, again on the left side, with samples of white bricks for plain and ornamenting buildings, fire bricks and retorts. The retorts are set up with the white brick already for operation. Kier Bros., of Pittsburg, Pa., also exhibit specimens of fire bricks for rolling mills and gas furnaces. Then comes a display of Connellsville coke, manufactured from the Globe mines near Broadford, Pa., an immense block of bituminous coal mined at Brockwayville, Jefferson Co., Pa., two more blocks of coal from Kittanning, more Connellsville coke and coal from Mt. Pleasant, Pa., and some fine bricks from Albany, N. Y. Next is a display of bituminous white ash coal from Cambria Co., Pa., and opposite to this there is exhibited samples of carbonized stone and pipes made by the patentee, who shows daily the process by which sand and cement are converted into solid stone, window caps, sills, building blocks, paving stones, etc. This enterprising exhibitor offers a reward of

TWENTY ADMISSION TICKETS To the Centennial exhibition to any person who will send him a customer to whom he can sell territory for the introduction of his patent. Now we come to some samples of Bruce's vesper street lamp posts for villages and private grounds where gas is not used. The lantern is moveable and can be lowered and raised to its place again when necessary by a very simple contrivance, no steps or ladder being required in lighting. Another display of coal is made here from Westmoreland Co., Pa., and the Kaska Co. of Philadelphia, shows samples of fire bricks and tiles. The Union Mining Co., of Allegheny Co., Pa., exhibit fire bricks, different sizes of furnace shapes and the crude material used in manufacturing. Then there is a handsome display of galvanized sheet iron for cornices, railing, mantle and other work as manufactured at the sheet metal works at Camden, New Jersey. Three very pretty tomb stones from Pennsylvania. The State of Alabama occupies the next space with her mineral exhibit which consists of some small but good specimens of bituminous coal, coke and iron, with the fossils and flora of the Warrior and Cahaba coal measures. Alabama also has an exhibition a geological section in miniature of the Cahaba coal measures which are found on the line of the South and North Alabama Railroad. This section is shown in handsome glass cases and makes a very creditable appearance. A section of the Red Mountain iron bed is exhibited. This bed extends through the State from a southwest to a northeasterly direction for a distance of 120 miles. Mr. Bell, of Smyrna, Delaware, makes an exhibit opposite to Alabama, of porous drain tiles and from Johnsonville, Pa., are shown samples of fire brick. Then we find a model of a

COAL AND ORE SEPARATOR Which separates and collects the various grades of coal and ore into separate places. Models of the cars and tracks used are also shown. Kentucky occupies nearly all the rest, about one-third, of this building. West Virginia has a small exhibit in this section which consists of specimens of coal, iron, limestone, marble and heavy spar. A piece of the rock from the natural bridge in Rockbridge county is shown, on which a young farmer living on the James river has painted a picture of the bridge. There are also some fine quartz crystals and specimens of stalactites and stalagmites from Meyers cave. The Selma, Rome and Dalton R. R. Co. also have some space in this section in which is shown the minerals found on the line of that road. Here are iron ores from the Stonewall, Amaston and Alabama furnaces with samples of railroad wheels made therefrom, some fine samples of charcoal from Tecumseh, fine slabs of slate from from Jacksonville, Alpine and Patoona, Fla.

The Kentucky exhibit in this building is about the only one deserving any praise. A few fire bricks, tiles, chunks of iron ore, lumps of coal, lamp posts, etc., will do to glance at for a few minutes, but they are not interesting for a letter. Wishing to give you an idea of the contents of Annex No. 2, we have skipped along as quickly as possible through them. The work of collecting the minerals, soils, etc., exhibited from Kentucky has been done by the State Geological Survey. The collection consists of a large representation of the GEOLOGICAL HORIZON Fossils, rocks and the different minerals. More than 1400 of the specimens have been analyzed by the State chemist, and his certificate of analysis accompanies each specimen. These specimens are all arranged in suitable glass cases, instead of being piled up on shelves and platforms as is generally the case with other exhibits in the different buildings. The soils and subsoils of every GEOLOGICAL HORIZON In the State are also shown, a complete analysis accompanying each variety. Two cases are filled with implements and relics of the prehistoric ages. There is a good exhibit too of hewn blocks of limestone used for building purposes, and a small statue, well executed, of the HERO OF ASHLAND From Kentucky marble. In a case by itself is shown a mummy which was found in grand arena case Edmondson Co., near Glasgow junction Geological maps of the State and of different sections are shown. Some fine specimens of coal and iron also which are quite interesting from the fact of their being found in veins running through the same hill. One of the mineral specimens is very REMARKABLE AND HANDSOME. It consists of a number of clear bluish-green crystals of fluor spar from Lexington Co., which was taken from a large vein of that mineral. This mineral is quite valuable in that section as a fertilizer in connection with marl. FIFTY PHOTOGRAPHIC VIEWS From different sections of the State are also exhibited, many of which show different farms in the blue grass region. One view is taken from the door of Henry Clay's house looking towards Lexington, another Midway and vicinity, and another Boone's Knob on the Kentucky river. A pamphlet, entitled "A General Account of the Commonwealth of Kentucky," containing about 100 pages, is distributed without charge. This pamphlet has been proposed by N. S. Shaler, Director Kentucky Geological Survey, especially for the Centennial Exhibition. It contains an interesting account of the geography, general geology, surface, river systems, soils, climate, scenery, markets and transportation, price of lands, investments of capital and labor, education, future prospects, coal fields, quality of coal and the coal trade, marl beds, mineral springs, tobacco crop and the iron ores of the State, with other valuable information concerning Kentucky. This finishes our account of the mineral annexes. Colorado makes a fine display of her minerals in a building occupied exclusively by that State and Kansas. The Central Pacific Railroad exhibits a collection of minerals in Agricultural Hall made from the Pacific States and Territories. We have now mentioned all the mineral exhibits which have been made here outside of the Main Building. In this building are displayed all the foreign collections as well as several private collections from the United States. We shall reserve our description of them for another letter. FRAZER.

SIoux BUTCHERS. GEN. CUSTER MILLED AND HIS FORCE ANNIHILATED. Seventeen Officers and 315 Brave Men Massacred. SALT LAKE, July 5. A special correspondent of the Helena (Montana) Herald writes from Stillwater, Montana, July 2d: Muggins Taylor, a scout for General Gibbons, arrived here last night, direct from Little Horn river. General Custer found the Indian camp of about 2,000 lodges on the Little Horn, and immediately attacked the camp. Custer took five companies and charged the thickest portion of the camp. Nothing is known of the operations of this detachment only as they trace it by the dead. Major Reno commanded the other seven companies and attacked the lower portion of the camp. The Indians poured in a murderous fire from all directions. The greater portion of the Indians fought on horseback. Gen. Custer, his two brothers, nephew and brother-in law were all killed and not one of his command escaped. Two hundred and seven men were buried in one place, and the killed are estimated at 300, with only 31 wounded. The Indians surrounded Reno's command and held them one day in the hills, cut off from water, until Gen. Gibbons' camp came in sight, when they broke camp in the night and left. The Seventh Cavalry fought like tigers, and were overcame by mere brute strength. The Indian loss cannot be estimated, as they bore off and cached most of their killed. The remnant of the cavalry and Gibbons' command are returning to the mouth of the Little Horn, where a steamer lies. The Indians got the arms of the dead soldiers. There were seventeen commissioned officers slain. The whole Custer family died at the head of their column. The exact loss is not known, as both Adjutants and the Sergeant Major were killed. The Indian camp was from three to four miles long, and was two miles up the Little Horn from its mouth. The Indians actually pulled the men off their horses in some instances. I give this as Taylor told me, as he was over the field after the battle. The above is confirmed by other letters, which say Custer met with a fearful disaster. Later.—A Times extra, issued at Roseman, Montana, July 3d, says: Mr. Taylor, bearer of the dispatches from Little Horn to Fort Ellis, arrived this evening and reports the following: The battle was fought on the 25th, thirty or forty miles below the Little Horn. Custer attacked an Indian village of from 2,500 to 3,000 warriors on one side, and Colonel Reno was to attack it on the other. Three companies were placed on a hill as a reserve. General Custer and fifteen officers, and every man belonging to the five companies, were killed. Colonel Reno retreated under the protection of the reserves. The whole number of killed was 315. General Gibbons joined Colonel Reno when the Indians left. The battle-ground looked like a slaughter-pen, as it was, being in a narrow ravine. The dead were very much mutilated. The situation looks serious. Gen. Terry arrived at Gibbons' camp on a steambot and crossed the command over and accompanied it to join Custer, who knew it was coming before the fight occurred. Lieutenant Crittenden, son of Gen. Crittenden, is among the killed. Chicago, July 6. Up to 10 o'clock General Sheridan has received no official or other direct information of the reported massacre of General Custer's 315 men on Little Horn, but is expecting reports of some kind momentarily. There is reason to fear that the worst reports will be confirmed—perhaps aggravated. OMAHA, July 6. An officer at headquarters here says that a dispatch has just gone through by telegraph from General Gibbons to General Sherman stating that General Terry was killed. TOMB. FOURTEEN—At Verdi July 6th, 1876, John Perry Feakes, aged 1 year, 10 months and 16 days.

DEMOCRATIC RALLY. GRAND TILDEN AND HENDRICKS RATIFICATION MEETING, AT RENO ON Saturday Evening, July 8th, 1876.

The Washoe County Democrats, Independents and all men "opposed to the rotten, corrupt and thieving" administration of the affairs of the General Government as practiced by the Republican party and evidenced in each department of the Public Service by the criminal action of its incumbents (Republicans) high in authority, acknowledged leaders of the party, commencing with Simon Cameron, ex-Secretary of War, whose peculation drove him to resignation of his position and finishing with members of the present Cabinet, including in the list of vampires, a long line of such men as Schuyler Colfax, General Belknap, General Babcock and General Schenck, whose corrupt and thieving practices, backed by and in league with an almost invincible power of the most perfectly organized body of office-holders (over 80,000 strong) ever known in the world's history, surviving only for perpetuation of their power and consequent immunity for crimes past, and security from future molestation. This vast army of leeches upon the body politic in turn leagued with and supported by a still larger army of rascals whose sole business is driving and executing means for robbing the Public Treasury, the Bank, the Railroad, the Indian Reservation contract and other rings, each robbing the Treasury of millions annually, and each the other's protector, forming a compact mass of corruption and power so formidable in its proportion as to require the united efforts of the American people to free our country from this blighting curse. For this purpose and to this end all honest reformers are invited to participate in the ratification of the St. Louis nominees, for PRESIDENT, GOVERNOR S. A. TILDEN of New York, for VICE PRESIDENT, HON. T. A. HENRICKS of Indiana, able Statesmen pure Patriots and Tried Reformers, whose election is a guarantee to our country of the speedy and certain destruction of all wicked combinations, corrupt rings and influences used to the injury of the Public Service and of condign punishment to the perpetrators. Whose election will be a guarantee that all operations of the Government will be conducted on the strict old Jacksonian principle of Honesty, Capability, Republican Simplicity. Whose election makes merit a leading qualification for retention in official position. Whose election ensures the carrying out of the principles promulgated as the platform of the party in the coming campaign. Then come forth every well-wisher of his country and by a united effort, show our appreciation of these Great Reformers and Eminent Statesmen. J. H. GRAHAM and OGDEN HILES of Virginia City and our own local orators will address the meeting. By order of the Democrats of Reno, in Mass Meeting assembled and of the County Central Committee. HENRY WESTON, Chairman Democratic County Com.
